(10/12/10 - Pittsburgh, PA) Hot on the heels of their sold out European tour, U2 has confirmed that the final date on next year's reschedule 360° tour will take place on Tuesday, July 26th in Pittsburgh at Heinz Field .

U2 360° will start-up next year and visit Mexico City on May 14th before returning to North America. By the time the tour returns to North America, it will have been seen by well over 4 million fans.

With a cylindrical video system of interlocking LED panels, and a steel structure rising 150 feet from the floor over a massive stage with rotating bridges, the band has truly created an intimate 360° experience for concert goers. Long-time U2 Show Director Willie Williams has worked again with architect Mark Fisher (ZooTV, PopMart, Elevation and Vertigo), to create an innovative 360 design, which affords an unobstructed view for the audience.

Tickets ($30, $55, $95 & $250) go on sale Monday, Oct. 18 at 10 a.m. via livenation.com, all Ticketmaster outlets or charge by phone at 1-800-745-3000. All tickets subject to applicable ticketing fees.
